

16 A student argues that when a rational number is multiplied by an irrational number the result will always be an irrational number.

16 (a) Identify the rational number for which the student's argument is not true. [1 mark]

16 (b) Prove that the student is right for all rational numbers other than the one you have identified in part (a). [4 marks]